lasting, thou art God." Each age unfolds new evidences of how his promises have been kept. Each life can have the joy of this discovery within its own spiritual experiences. God never fails!

Paul affirms "we are fellow workmen for God." This relationship comes only as we give ourselves through decisions, promises, and service to those ideals to which God has given himself. When we will to do his will, we become one with him.

Power is one of the products of this relationship. God's power for the accomplishing of his tasks comes down to the earth through men. In such a power age as we live in, we can easily see the need of that spiritual power which alone, the atomic scientists tell us, can control and render harmless the atomic bombs now created. The power which comes from within the hearts of dedicated men is the greatest power the world has ever known. It has transformed continents, crushed civilization, and caused others to rise. It has spanned the world to carry its message to mankind. Even now it is able to do abundantly more than we are able to think of or ask for. Should not such power have strong safeguards lest it be used unworthily? What are some of these safeguards? Are our promises to God more than words or sentiment? How does God regard them?

What we shall promise God for 1952 is our greatest question as we watch the old year out and the new one in. We could look back and recall other promises made at other times—now forgotten and unkept—and brush them off and use them again. We could let the year go out and the new one begin without making any new promises by saying, "I'd rather not make them than break them." Or we could search for those hidden springs from which flow the waters of all our life's activities and promise that these shall be forever clean and purified by the touch of God's holy presence. Let each one consider seriously what he believes God would have him do. Does he want me to make any new decisions, any new promises as I begin a new year?

"Seek first the kingdom," he is saying even as we ask what he wants us to do. Put God at the center. Let the self be a devoted servant—one who loses his life that he may find it eternally. Own his call, accept his sovereignty, promise to be the one whose life is so dedicated that it is worthy to be an heir of God, a joint heir with Jesus Christ.

"Love your neighbor," he is saying even as he helps us to know that all his people everywhere who are in distress are our neighbors. Use your skills of mind and hand to bind up the wounded, brokenhearted, fainthearted people of a war-sick and fear-ridden world. Be among them as one possessed with the power of God for the amelioration of the ills of man. It will cost much to make this promise—but will you make it?

"Prove me now herewith," says God as he points to all the promises he has made to man. Promise him that you will seek to fulfill all the conditions necessary so that he can fulfill all his promises to you. Will you promise this? God promises—now let us promise.
